An Indian Bride

Dr. Richa Tripathi

Assistant Professor

GCET, Gr. Noida

Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam Technical University,
Uttar Pradesh

Who is she in the mirror?
Reflection of a faded stature
What's her true identity?
Is she someone's entity?
A being, a girl, a daughter
A friend, a chum, a sister
Or just a bride
Soon to be a wife
Is she chained?
Look, bangles in her hands?
Or a sign of pious bands
What's around her neck?
A snooze or a bleak pearl magic
Why this collar of being in a marriage
Execution of continuation
Or a divine bond of perpetual union
Look at her forehead
This mid dot or a particle
Projection of her pride and mystic supremacy
Or Just an article to show her authoritative
Look at her hair parting
Crammed with red lead, the vermilion
Just a mere compulsion
Or her merry declaration
My mate, in a million
Beautiful silver anklet
Peeping from her foots
Depiction of an Indian roots
Or fetter of a caged crook
Her toe ring
Her twinge or pleasure
Her longing or pressure
Nothing is without significance
If true love is her pedestal
Everything becomes her poise
Don't let her be a fake
Her embellish, a total waste

Let her be, what she is
Not just a one's marionette
