The Fireflies

Tuhin Sengupta

As I cycled , as a boy, through the darkness and night
fear of the elephants sitting heavy on my heart
I knew it is the place where two men were pulped to death.
I was escaping from the fear throbbing at my heart.
Then my eyes were transfixed at the throbbing luminous light.
Millions fireflies made it a tree of fire
Unreal dreamy and of a moment of my drab life
got the tune of angelic harp.
I stood there my body fixed
Mind annihilated and soul burning bright with the glowing flies
So near and so far.
So of earth and of heaven

Darkness fathered, driven by sex
Their lights spoke of something else.

You are like these lights..
Falling on my path..covered in darkness..so so far.
I can but feel you through my mind.a creation's wonder in common flesh and blood.
I may be a threat to you...a bad choice of a bad moment. . .one who falls in the mould of the baddy guy.

You burn bright to me...like stars dancing in earths entombing dark singing in luminous language of a more perfect pattern under a different sky
