Let's take a moment to respect them

Mithun Dey

 Their lives are fundamentally quite different
Lives in wretched, the strange society flings them out
 Their lives become tough and harsh
However, I always look at the smiling muscles in their face
 Their role is extremely entrenched in our culture
 Containing masculinity identities, sexual encounter
And cross-gender activities, introduces them as third-gender status
 Their identity with Lord Shiva is carnal ambivalent form
The Shiva who integrates both male and female characteristics
 And hermaphroditic, we take them poorly
 And think they are all harassing beggars
Sukumarika who inspired both freight and derision
 Arjuna had to love the life of a eunuch
 Disguise as Brihannala, a transgender
 Let's take a moment to respect them

(Note: This poem is based on transgender and their wretched lifestyle. In our society they are quietly estranged and everyone observes them in different way. We don't feel their grief-stricken soul and smile at them. Now let's skip our bigoted thoughts on them and let's take a moment to respect them.)
